EDITORIAL

ATHER TIME calls once more at the outer gate of Girard College and beckons. It is our turn to go. We gather our belongings, pack our outfit—precious books and all—and walk slowly to meet him. Tears come as we pause to take one last look at our beloved home and school; but this cannot be. We must go out and make our marks in the world. We leave humbly—not as conquerors. We leave determined to work hard, to behave well, to do the best with every opportunity that arises, and to improve ourselves as we go on hoping and striving for great responsibilities.

The chief possession of our class may be our spirit. We are fresh, trim, eager, and resolved that

"God's in his Heaven— All's right with the world!"

Eight or nine years ago the majority of our class entered Girard. We were then striplings unaware of responsibility. Everything was new and strange. It took patience on the part of our instructors to mould us into the patterns desired. Gradually the time came when the strong could be discerned from the weak. During the process of elimination which naturally followed, our class was thinned out to what it is at the present time, the cream of the crop.

We will for that reason be constantly watched by those left behind. Therefore, we must enter into our new existence with the thought of carrying on the work of those great men who have gone before, with a zeal worthy of their praise. We have striven to attain or surpass marks set by other classes. Whether we have or not is for our mentors and friends, the Faculty, to decide.

Ever since we entered Girard, the Faculty has been with us, guiding, molding, counselling, and encouraging. They did all that was in their power to understand us, and to lend assistance whenever possible. To them belongs a large measure of the credit for having made us what we are and what we are to be.

The lion's share of credit, though, belongs to our mothers and guardians. We always, in our upward climb, had a vision tucked away in the inner fastnesses of our minds of those who would be waiting to receive us triumphantly at the end. We knew their hearts would be broken if we did not succeed. That vision has been a constant beacon light. It has drawn us onward. We pay tribute to them now.

We cherish our childhood scenes. We shall strive to compensate those who part in creating them by proving ourselves worthy of what has been done for us. Let us climb earnestly upward, surmounting all obstacles, aiming unceasingly for success by service to others. Who without that ideal is worthy of the name Girard? Until we reach that goal, we cannot pay our debts to Stephen Girard, our mothers, guardians, and humanity.

Class Socials

Till the stars grow dim we'll dance.-Proctor.

UR CLASS SOCIALS were undoubtedly the form of entertainment from which we derived the greatest pleasure and enjoyment during the last two years in Girard College. The absolute success of these social evenings was caused in a large part by the genuine interest taken by the various hosts and hostesses who served us in planning and guiding these affairs. Now that the last, faint, lingering strain of music has faded away, we wish to take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation to all those who assisted in making them so enjoyable.

Our first social was held on January 11, 1929, and proved to be one of the incidents in our lives at Girard to which we shall always look back with pleasure. The music started at exactly eight o'clock, and until the close of the evening everyone was in high spirits. During the intermission, Fred Lane and Joseph Gualtieri entertained those present by singing a few popular songs. They did their part in a very creditable manner; so well, in fact, that at the next social they were again requested to serve us in the capacity of vocal entertainers. All too quickly the dance was over. With varied feelings of regret that the first social was past, and with anticipation for the next to come, we took ourselves away from the scene of revelry.

As we returned to our regular duties the next day, it seemed that our Junior-Two Social was far away; nevertheless, almost before we realized it, May 1929, the evening of our second class social arrived. At this dance, many novelties were introduced which proved to be the source of much merrymaking and enjoyment for ours and subsequent class socials. Besides the amusement furnished by the pair present at the first dance, we were entertained by Joe Sbaragl'a and Jerry Terlingo, who illustrated a dance which was all their own. Needless to say, all reveled in the pleasure and entertainment that was ours for the night.

It was the Senior-One party that was unanimously agreed to be the best of the three in which our class had so far participated. It was held on November 22, 1929. At this dance, during the intermission, we were amused by a male quartet composed of members of our class who sang some popular songs in a very successful manner. We desire, at this time, to extend our congratulations and thanks to all who took part in the entertainment at our class socials.

The Senior-Two social was a very fitting accompaniment to our last term in Girard. It served to make even more firm the bonds of friendship that had so long united us. The affair was not only enjoyable, it was exceedingly beneficial. The planning and anticipation of this event created a sincere spirit of coöperation in us. It pervaded every member of the class, and before the dance was well under way, all who were physically capable of attending were present. "Happiness, 1 guess, is just a memory." So it seemed to us, as we came to the realization that our last class social was over; nevertheless, despite the fact that we never again shall be able to enjoy together, as students of Girard, the entertainment that we derived from these affairs, we shall always be capable of fondly remembering them.

> Joys too exquisite to last; Yet more exquisite when past.—Montgomery.

Our Trips

EEING without feeling has little value. If our trips to Valley Forge, Washington, and Shenandoah had been taken for the sole purpose of sight-seeing, their worth would have been but little. We went, rather, to catch the spirit of the place, that our lives might be enriched by the experience.

Everyone knows that at Valley Forge such and such a cross marks the spot where this or that general stood; everyone knows that one or another building in Washington is located here or there; and everyone knows too that so many tons of coal are mined in Shenandoah each year.

So when the boys went to Valley Forge they did not know just what to expect. What they found there is hard to explain. It is hard to explain because it is not tangible; it is something that reaches those small, obscure corners of the heart of every red-blooded American; that feeling of reverence and respect for those shabbily-clad men who made it possible for us to stand on those beautiful hills and feel tingling in our veins the thrill of Liberty.

Similarly, in Washington, when we walked her many streets and viewed her buildings and memorials, there seemed to grow in the mind of every boy a dim picture of what Washington and our country used to be, a clearer picture of what Washington and our country are now; and then above all, a vivid image of what we, as good citizens of these United States, should strive to make of our glorious country in the future.

And, of course, we need not worry about forgetting that wonderful trip to our own Girard Estate in the Shenandoah Valley for what we saw there and learned there has been stamped upon our minds with such clearness and beauty that it will take more than time to wipe it out. It was there that we saw a busy world at work—mines, the breakers, factories—all living symbols of progress.

Many members of June 1930 may walk up and down the steps of the Capitol as hardened, solemn senators, or may work as engineers in or about Shenandoah, or revisit Valley Forge; but no matter how many times they visit these places or how long they stay they will never feel that same thrill which they experienced when they saw, for the first time, these hallowed places.

Sports

N the way of sports, June 1930 started early, and as a result, established a creditable record for themselves, having thirty-five letter men.

Iskierski leads the class, having won the first "G" in the swimming season of 1928, and a letter for this sport every year since. In 1929, Schuck, Bramble, and Gualtieri also won letters in swimming along with Iskierski, and duplicated the feat in the season of 1930.

The class has been very successful in basketball. Kerstetter started this activity for us by winning his letter in 1929. At the same time, Dale, Hoagland, Morris, A. Moore, and Terlingo were awarded their numerals. Then, in 1930, the boys put forth a great fight, and as a result nine were presented with the coveted "G", while two earned numerals. Captain Al. Moore, Morris, Lane, Kerstetter, Hoagland, McCormick, Terlingo, Liebig, and Duffy were those who received their "G"s while Crawford and Powers were presented with numerals.

In 1928 Kerstetter received his numerals in soccer, and the following year letters were awarded to Morris, Iskierski, A. Moore, Saul, Terlingo, Lane, Ciavarelli, Kerstetter and Sharaglia. Wyncoop was given numerals..

For the past year, all of our teams have been very ably managed. Hauber managed basketball; Winston, baseball; Turner, swimming; and Stem, track. For this valuable service, each has been presented with a letter.

Credit must be given to the three cheer-leaders, R. Moore, Keown, and Gladfelter, who did so much to "pep up" and invigorate the team by their praiseworthy cheering. For this they too, were awarded "G's."

Captain Ed. Morris, Al. Moore, Lane, Hauber, Crawford, Terlingo, Hoagland, Bramble, and McCormick for their hard fighting in baseball this year received their "G's." Numerals were given to Dale, Kerstetter, Blunt, Powers, Buehl, and Higgins. Letters were also presented to Al. Moore, Morris, Lane, and Hoagland in 1929. At the same time, Crawford, Gualtieri, Dale, Terlingo, Buehl, Kerstetter, and Hauber won numerals. Al. Moore and Hoagland earned numerals back in 1928.

In the 1930 track team we have Captain Tinkleman, Dugan, P. Foreman, Hoskins, Saul, Wyncoop, Iskierski, and Bramble, all of whom have earned letters. This is the third with which Tinkleman has been presented. Bramble, Liebig, Wyncoop, and Iskierski have two to their credit in this sport.

Feldman and Roan, our sole stars in tennis, gained the varsity emblem for sole. These two and Ciavarelli have also been members of the squads in previous years.

School Publications

HE Class of June 1930 has literary talent revealed in a number of its members. These students, as an outlet for their activity, were chosen to represent the Class on the Girard Magazine, the Girard Nees, the Steel and Garnet, and the Commencement Record. They have striven to set a standard in these literary and journalistic organs which will give younger classes pride in attaining.

The unit that expresses the literary thought of the whole school, the Magazine, was ably guided this last term by Harvey E. Stochr, Editor-in-Chief, and his associate, Charles F. Schuck. These two piloted the Magazine into channels of endeavor hitherto unattained while Dr. Haskell gave excellent counsel.

The task of making the News as appealing as possible fell to the genius of C. Cheyney Brown, Editor-in-Chief, Thomas E. Bramble, News Editor, and William H. Gladfelter, Sports Editor. Under their management, and Professor Foust's supervision, the News did its best to become a medium of helpful influence and bearer of news for the students and the faculty. Through their efforts the News will probably appear later with the improvements that they strove to effect.

Gerald Smith and William E. Kerstetter represented the Class as correspondents to the Steel and Garnet, our alumni publication. The latter was materially aided by the valuable contributions of these two members of June 1930.

As for the COMMENCEMENT RECORD, that publication dealing exclusively with the achievements of the Class of June 1930, the Class selected those who they thought were best fitted for planning this book. Those so honored by the Class' approval were Thomas E. Bramble, Editor-in-Chief, and his associates, C. Cheyney Brown, William H. Gladfelter, William E. Kerstetter, and Gerald Smith. The Record is an honest account of our activities during our stay in Girard. The members of the staff have done their best to show that the June 1930 class has an enviable record.

Musical Achievements

THE Class of June 1930 was fairly well represented in musical activities during its stay at Girard. It can justly be proud of having made a creditable record in the Band, Orchestra, Theatre Orchestra, and Glee Club.

The band was ably captained this past term by Marcus R. Dale who was also head of the trombone section. Harry Dugan, Assistant Leader, played the clarinet in the same row with William Bonsall, Second Lieutenant, and George Lewis. Keeve Winston, saxophonist, Bertolet Rickenbach, a capable drummer, and Douglas Wright, bassoon player, complete our representation in the Band.

In the Orchestra we were similarly well represented. Elmer Roan, first violinist and Leader, Harvey Stochr and Delbert Wilson, first violinists, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster respectively, assumed able leadership. Wilbert Hyneman, manager and trombonist, and William Kieme who played the French horn, complete our identification with the Orchestra.

Several members of the Band and Orchestra from our class helped instrumentally in making the Theatre Orchestra the success it is today. They are Elmer Roan, Leader, Wilbert Hyneman, Delbert Wilson, William Kieme, Harry Dugan, and Harvey Stoehr. Partly through their efforts, this Orchestra has come to be an accepted and dignified institution in Girard College.

As for the Glee Club, that organization representing the best male voices of the students, the Class of June 1930 can boast twenty-nine members, or slightly more than one-third of the entire number of seventy-five. The members of our class are: First tenor—Harry Dugan, George Hoagland, Edward Turner, William Bonsall, Joseph Gualtieri, Robert Lloyd, Albert Moore, Vice-President, Elmer Roan, Charles Schuck, and Harry Stem. Second tenor—William Gladfelter, George Lewis, Gerard Terlingo, and Delbert Wilson. Baritone—Robert Buehl, Maldwyn Jones, William Kerstetter, Librarian, Marcus Dale, President, Joseph Duffy, Fred Lane, and Joseph Sharaglia. Bass—Thomas Bramble, Librarian, Cheyney Brown, Victor Hauber, Wilbert Hyneman, James McCormick, Howard Hoskins, Eugene Saul, and Douglas Wright.

To those who made our success in musical endeavor possible, we wish to extend our most sincere thanks and appreciation for what they have done. We have in mind Mr. George O. Frey, Head of the Department of Instrumental Music, Mr. Earl Pfouts, Violin Instructor, Mr. Edward Cullen, Band Instructor, Mr. Bruce A. Carey, Director of the Glee Club, and Mr. Harry C. Banks, Jr., Organist.

Appreciation

THE Class of June 1930 wishes to express its sincere and hearty approval to Misses Smythe and Keech, Messrs, Jarrard, Stewart and Patchell, our hostesses and hosts, for the keen interest they have taken in the class.

The success of the class' social affairs was in no small part due to the emphatic and spirited coöperation of these hosts and hostesses.

We especially want to thank Mr. Jarrard, who, though handicapped by his long illness has done much for the class, and has established a friendship which will long endure in the hearts of the boys.

We sincerely hope that our parting will not sever the bonds of our priceless freedships with those with whom we have come into such close and pleasant contact.

Behind the Footlights

"A LL the world's a stage," said Shakespeare, and, as far as our class is concerned, quite a bit of our world was a stage.

We cannot boast a Garrick or an Arliss, but we may comfort ourselves in the fact that from first to last every member of June 1930 did his level best to boost the standard of public presentations set by preceding classes.

As is generally the case, the class play was the most outstanding accomplishment of the year. It was a departure from the usual, as plays go at Girard, for the plot wove itself around characters of a modern type, rather than those of people who lived centuries ago such as Shakespeare or Rostand portrayed. The play, "The Admirable Crichton," was written by a contemporary author, James M. Barrie.

Thomas Bramble took the role of Crichton, the butler. This seemed a rather innocent part, and so it was until near the climax of the performance when Crichton came to the front, while Lord Loam, in the person of Robert Lloyd, head of an English family, drifted into obscurity. He was not alone in this, however. To understand this comedy one must know that this particular English household, with Lord Loam at its head, once a month changed places socially with the servants. After one of these cflanges they decided to go for a sea voyage, and before they knew it they were wrecked and marooned on a desert island. The relationships on the island soon developed into those comically assumed back in dear old England, Crichton taking the lead. Then they were discovered and rescued, and each awkwardly fell back into his old position. Curtain.

Among the ones who were taken down a few rungs on the social ladder by Crichton while on the island were Ernest, Lady Mary and Lady Catherine; while Tweeny, formerly a servant, became very important socially as did Crichton, Joseph Gualtieri gave a most comical interpretation of Ernest, while Fred Laue took the part of Lady Mary, and Joseph Ciavarelli, that of Tweeny. Then, too, there was Eugene Saul, playing the part of Treherne, a clergyman, who was to be found with the family both in England and on the island. Joseph Duffy, impersonated Lady Brocklehurst, mother of Lord Brocklehurst who like Ernest was a jolly old Englishman. Then, last but not least, the roles of servants were very ably filled by Elmer Roan, Monsieur Fleuri, a chef. William Scheib, a footman, Joseph Sbaraglia, a stable boy, John Hrom, a coachman, and Howard Higgins, a maid. Despite its complexities, the play was given in a first-class manner. Here we should like to extend to the class of January 1931, full appreciation for their cooperation in making this play a success.

The debating team also came through with flying colors. The debate with George School was the fifth of a series of debates with our friendly opponents and, both schools have taken two decisions, the discussion was both interesting and exciting. Girard's winning team consisted of four members of our class: Meyer Feldman, Captain, William Gladfelter, Joseph Gualtieri, and John Hrom, serving as alternate.

Although we were represented by only one classmate in the declamation contest, Thomas Bramble took second prize on a subject which, as far as our class went in presenting candidates for the final contest, was quite appropriate: "The Man Who Stands Alone."

In speaking of public appearances, we must not forget the fine showing our French students made in the play "Joan of Arc" given on a Monday morning under the direction of Miss Frey, our French teacher. The play was unique. It was made up of a rather small cast: Charles Liebig acted as Joan of Arc, Joseph Gualtieri was an English soldier. Gerard Terlingo and Meyer Feldiman appeared as two French soldiers, and Joseph Ciavarelli, a French flowergirl.

Then, too, there were several activities in which the whole class participated. Every member made at least his debut before the public, and each in turn did very well. We must not forget, too, the good work done by those twelve classmates who were chosen from volunteers to give Sunday evening reports.

Mr. Andrews may be assured of the deepest appreciation and most sincere thanks from the Senior Class since all know that it was he who made these successes possible.

Military Organization

THE Class of June 1930 has been very well represented in the Girard College Battalion. During the past several months four members of the class have served as company captains and one became Captain of Staff. Gerald Smith captained Company A; Edward Turner, Company C; and Thomas Bramble, Company D. Victor Hauber was Captain of Staff.

The following lieutenants in the class gave a good account of themselves: Charles Meisky, Robert Iskierski, Charles Schuck, and Ralph Powers. Adjutant—George Hoagland. Sergeant-Major—Joseph Gualtieri. Sergeant-Major of the Staff—Raymond Moore. Color Sergeants—William Scheib and William Kerstetter. Quartermaster—Maldwyn Jones. Supply Sergeant—Joseph Ciaverelli.

In addition to this representation several other members of the class have been sergeants at one time or another during their service in the Battalion. Among them are Paul Foreman, Thomas Hake, Howard Hoskins, Bernard Tinkleman, James McCormiek, Robert Buchl, Cheyney Brown, Wilford Scott, Albert Moore, and Edward Morris.

A signal honor which the recipient deserved well went to Robert Lloyd who ecived a medal for proficiency in the single competitive drill two consecutive terms. May the drills of life prove that he possesses the same merit in meeting their requirement too.

And so the Class of June 1930 receives honorable discharge from the Girard College Battalion.
